J. W. B. Head Calls For Adult Education On Massive, Well-Financed Scale

The professional administrator of the National Jewish Welfare Board called on his organization and its affiliated groups to undertake a program of adult Jewish education "on a massive, well-financed scale in healthy cooperation with synagogues and Jewish educational agencies."

Samuel D. Gershovitz, executive vice president of the board, urged action on this goal soon to develop "a vigorous understanding of and support by American Jewish leadership of Jewish life and traditions among American Jews for our children and for ourselves."

He made his plea at the biennial national convention of the board in St. Louis, Missouri, which is the national association of Jewish community centers and Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Associations, says the New York Times. The board is also the Government-authorized agency serving the religious and morale needs of Jewish personnel in the armed forces and in veterans' hospitals.

Mr. Gershovitz reported that construction of Jewish community centers in the last ten years amounted to $41,315,000. He said this building had been done by "voluntary will and desire of the thoughtful and far-sighted leadership of each Jewish community."

He emphasized that the new buildings were "regarded as true and basic Jewish communal institutions whose programs have become sensitive to Jewish communal needs today." He declared that these institutions, because of the greater leisure time available, must serve "for enjoyment and learning in the Jewish humanities and general humanities, as well as a setting for individual and family recreation and physical, social, and intellectual activity."

The convention re-elected Solomon Litt, of New York, a member of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Aml & Co., as president of the board. The delegates adopted a resolution calling for a recruiting campaign to enlist 1,600 professional Jewish community-center workers who will be needed in the next ten years because of the growing Jewish community-center network.

At another session, Irving Kane, president of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, declared that in the next ten years American Jews "cannot expect a diminution in the burden which we shall be asked to bear for overseas needs and for Jewish needs within the United States."

The Council is the representative body of 215 Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, serving 800 Jewish communities in the U.S. and Canada, says the New York Times. The affiliated groups raise annually 90 per cent of all the funds received by the United Jewish Appeal.

Mr. Kane told the session that in about three years when the German reparations agreement ends, the Israeli Government would be confronted with the problem of having to find a substitute for the $70,000,000 to $80,000,000 a year it now received in reparations from Bonn.

He also said that under separate reparations agreements, the Jewish Agency for Israel would no longer receive about $11,000,000 a year for its programs. This holds true, he said, for the Joint Distribution Committee, which has been receiving about $7,000,000 a year.

The Council's affiliated bodies, he declared, will have to make up this "foreseeable loss of about $18,000,000."

The need for providing social, recreational, religious and educational services to service men and their dependents as a family unit on military installations was emphasized by the head of the National Jewish Welfare Board.

The president, Solomon Litt of New York, in a report to 600 delegates attending the Board's biennial convention at the Chase Hotel, in St. Louis, Missouri, declared there were more military wives and children today than there were service men. The Board is the Government-authorized agency for meeting the religious, welfare, and morale needs of Jewish military personnel, hospitalized veterans and their families.

Mr. Litt estimated that 2,600,000 service men and 8,400,000 wives and children were now living on or near military posts — a reversal of the previous ratio. He stressed that civilian agencies engaged in ministering to the needs of military personnel must now also provide the same kind of service to their families.

Mr. Litt said his agency now "faces new challenges and increased responsibilities" with Jewish personnel in the nation's armed forces. His organization, he went on, must now provide not only for the religious morale requirements of the Jewish G. I.'s "but also provide a healthy atmosphere in which their children can grow and help their families develop and hold on to a sense of stability and a sense of belonging to the communities where they are temporarily resident."

His report disclosed that the Board had performed 10,000 married services to military families in counseling, guidance and referrals last year. It also showed that there had been a cumulative attendance of 2,485,000 people at 37,170 board-sponsored group activities — recreational, educational, religious and cultural.

Mr. Litt said that services to individuals had totaled 589,300, and 478,000 hours of time had been given by board volunteers to meet the leisure-time needs of G. I. families, says the New York Times. Jewish military chaplains and members of 271 local board armed services committees served more than 1,000 domestic and overseas installations.

Louis Stern, of South Orange, N. J., a Board vice president and retiring chairman of the organization's Jewish community center division, called attention to the "difficult problem of Sabbath programming" at Jewish community centers because of the desire to keep these "programs in harmony with Sabbath practice and tradition."

Dewey Short, Assistant Secretary of the U.S. Army, at the Jewish Welfare Convention St. Louis, Missouri, made a strong plea for parents to instill in their sons an "awareness and understanding of why they must fulfill their military obligations."

Mr. Short emphasized that it "is up to each and every parent to view military service as their sons' essential contribution toward the preservation of human dignity, of liberty, of freedom — in short — of America."

He asserted that the maintenance of a vast military structure was imperative because of the

Report Of Labor Body On Soviet Jews Is Grim

A grim picture of the plight of Jews in the Soviet Union and its satellites, marked by the suppression of every phase of Jewish cultural and religious life, was described in Atlantic City recently in a special report by the Jewish Labor Committee.

The report, as well as resolutions dealing with this issue and other domestic and international problems, came at the close of the silver jubilee conference of the committee in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, says the New York Times. The Committee, with headquarters in New York, represents 600,000 Jewish workers in the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. It has long been known for its vigorous opposition to Communism.

The report, delivered by Nathan Chanin, chairman of the committee's administrative body, was based on documents from the agency's European network. It called attention to the "continued gagging of the Yiddish language, the liquidation of Yiddish literature and schools" in the Soviet Union. It declared that Jews in the Soviet had been "ghettoized and secluded."

Soviet Jews, the report continued, "do not know peaceful co-existence within their own nation." Jews are discriminated against in the Red army, in the diplomatic corps, and in educational institutions, the report said.

In Poland, it continued, officials have displayed a "lack of concern for Jewish problems." The report indicated that Polish Jews wanted to emigrate, "the majority to Israel."

In Rumania, everything is being done by the Rumanian government to "destroy the vestiges that remained of Rumanian Jewry after World War II." The report called on Jewish communities the world over "to be cognizant of the fact that they (Rumanian Jews) need our help to aid them to emigrate."

It has been roughly estimated that there are about 3,000,000 Jews in the Soviet Union and an additional 1,000,000 in the satellites, says the New York Times. In contrast, the report pointed to flourishing Jewish communities in other nations, particularly in Israel and the United States. However, the report deplored the lack of Yiddish newspaper or any "Yiddish cultural life" in Great Britain. The report said that "since Great

Israel Feels U. S., Britain Wish To See It Strong

Israel will get $500,000,000 from West Germany in loans or investments over the next ten years. In a report over the State Radio of Israel the agreement was said to have been reached between Chancellor Adenauer and Premier David Ben-Gurion at their recent meeting in New York.

An authoritative source said the report had been received from London and cleared by a member of the Premier's party there, says the New York Times. But Israeli officials continued to maintain they had no knowledge of the agreement. The Bonn Foreign Ministry has denied a report that Israel would get a loan of $108,000,000.

The assistance would be timely. Reparations and restitution from Germany are to taper off during the next few years; twelve-year bonds floated in the United States will fall due shortly, and receipts from new bond sales will go toward redeeming those that mature.

Economic planners in Israel had been discussing austerity measures to cope with the loss of those sources. Israel also is negotiating with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development for a substantial loan to replace some of those sources.

Premier David Ben-Gurion returned to Israel from London convinced that Britain and the United States regard his country as a stabilizing force in the Middle East that must be kept strong. The Premier was cordially received by Prime Minister Macmillan and his advisers.

A source close to Mr. Ben-Gurion said his visit there and in the United States had created a "favorable climate" in which Israel could expect a hearing on her needs. The source said the Premier had been assured that Britain and the United States wish, in self-interest, to maintain a balance of strength in the Middle East.

There has been no official confirmation of reports that Mr. Ben-Gurion was promised new arms by the British. But observers noted that Mr. Macmillan, in replying to questions in Parliament, had refused to state that British arms would not be sold to the Israelis.

Mr. Ben-Gurion, the Israeli source said, "came away convinced that Israel will not be sold short in any Western effort to solidify ties with the Arabs," says the

Former U. N. Under-Secretary Was A Prime Mover, Salesman Of Peace

Benjamin Alfonso Cohen, sixty-three, one of the prime movers in the organization of the United Nations Secretariat before his retirement in June, 1953, died of lung cancer in Doctor's Hospital, Mr. Cohen, who was a Chilean delegate to the United Nations at his death, lived at 77 Park Avenue, New York.

Mr. Cohen served as Assistant Secretary General of the U.N. from 1946 to 1953 when he was appointed under-secretary in charge of the Department of Trusteeship and Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories. He was in the latter post when he retired.

"Chile Ben" Cohen, as he was known around the U.N. to distinguish him from Benjamin V. Cohen, a former member of the American delegation, was one of the leading salesmen for the U.N. in the world, says the New York Herald Tribune. He was a tireless speaker who never missed an opportunity to sell the cause of world peace through negotiation.

Dag Hammarskjöld, Secretary-General of the U.N., issued the following tribute to Mr. Cohen:

"Mr. Cohen . . . made an invaluable contribution to the work of the United Nations. Completely dedicated to its aims and objectives, he worked indefatigably toward their realization. His democratic approach and general friendliness won him countless friends within the Secretariat, among the delegations and with the public generally, who will mourn his loss."

At his death, he was a full professor at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Rutherford, N. J., where he taught a course in contemporary society and was organizing a department of economic geography. He was also completing work on a volume called "The International Encyclopedia," a compendium of facts about international affairs.

He was born in Concepcion, in southern Chile, on March 18, 1896. His parents were Alberto and Rebecca Gallarate Cohen. The boy prepared at the English school in Lota, Chile, and took his baccalaureate degree at the University of Chile in Santiago. Later he received an M.S. magna cum laude, from Georgetown University, as well as honorary degrees from American University, Ithaca College, and the University of Florida.

He entered the Chilean foreign service in 1922 after eleven years as a reporter, city editor, and associate editor on several of Chile's most important newspapers. From 1928 to 1927, he served as secretary of the Chilean Embassy in Washington. From 1935 to 1938, he was director of the diplomatic department of the Chilean Foreign Office, says the New York Herald Tribune. He served as ambassador to Bolivia from 1939 to 1945 and in that year he served as ambassador to Venezuela.

Later that year, he left the service of the Chilean government to serve in the international secretariat of the United Nations for the executive committee and preparatory commission. During the U. N.'s first General Assembly in London, he served as chief of the information planning section.

NATIONAL WOMEN'S LEAGUE

Eastern Canadian Branch of the United Synagogue of America elected: Mesdames Ab Finestone, of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, president; A. M. Wertman, of Adath Israel, treasurer; Harvey Freedman, of Beth El, corresponding secretary; Seymour Shuchat, of Shaar Hashomayim, recording secretary; Mesdames Max Greenberg, of Shaar Zion; Max Gruber, of Adath Israel; Sydney Pedv, of Beth El; Henry Pass, of Agudath Israel, in Ottawa, Ont.; A. L. Goldberg, Women's League of Shaar Shalom Synagogue, in Halifax, N.S.; J. Koven, of Shaarei Zedek, in Saint John, N.B., vice-presidents. Mrs. Ab Finestone, 4635 Glenora Avenue, was recently appointed chairman of the weaving committee for Canadian Handicraft Guild, Provincial Branch, at the World's Fair, in Brussels, in 1958. Mrs. Finestone, through the Canadian National Exhibition, was invited to submit to the National Gallery at Ottawa her entry of woven linen damask material. It was sent as part of the Canadian Pavilion Exhibit and won a Certificate of Merit Award. During the World War II, Mrs. Finestone worked with her late husband who was one of the organizers of the Volunteer Transport Service instrumental in bringing home the men from overseas. She also served as vice-president on the Jewish Branch of Canadian Red Cross; headed the knitting division; and taught classes of the Red Cross personnel at Macdonald College in Crafts for Rehabilitation Service for overseas. She is a member of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue.

CANADA-ISRAEL

Investment Corp. has been established with an initial capital of $5,000,000, the decision to form the new corporation having been taken at a meeting at the Windsor Hotel attended by Jewish leaders from across Canada. Provisional officers are: Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, president; Lawrence Freeman, of Ottawa; and J. L. Oelbaum, of Toronto, vice-presidents; William Gittes, of Montreal, treasurer; Saul Hayes, of Montreal, secretary. The purpose of the Canada-Israel Investment Corp., as disclosed in a statement issued by Mr. Bronfman, is "to attract investment from the Canadian public on as broad a base as possible, for investment in diversified industries in Israel basic to its economy." The "expansion and reorganization of such industries," the statement said, would be done "through a Canadian company with Canadian management here and resident management in Israel." The initial $5,000,000 capital figure would be raised by the sale of stock sponsored by groups of leaders in all communities across Canada. Representatives from all sections of the Jewish community in Canada will be asked to assist in the soliciting of investment in the new corporation, and the board of directors will include leaders of the principal Jewish communities from the Atlantic Provinces to British Columbia. Those attending the meeting and all who participated in the Canadian Mission to Israel will constitute the provisional administrative committee until the company is given its formal incorporation. This would total some 70 members of the committee. The Mission was organized under the auspices of the Keren Hayesod — United Israel Appeal and the State of Israel Bonds, and worked in close co-operation with the ministries of the Israel Government. During the weeks spent in Israel in January, members of the Mission headed by Mr. Bronfman and Mr. Freeman, participated in high level talks with members of the Government, and established the advisability for the organization of a Canadian investment company which would assist in "securing" the Israeli economy. The following statement was issued in January on the return of the Mission to Canada: "The members of the Mission realized that there is an urgent need for the development and expansion of private investment programs with the object of strengthening Israel's economy, facilitating her industrial growth, and enlarging her capacity to receive and absorb immigrants. The members have approved in principle the establishment of a $5,000,000 investment corporation whose purpose it will be to stimulate and direct private Canadian investment in Israel, and plans are being prepared for submission of the project to the Jewish community of Canada."

of Canada: Jewish community representatives from all across Canada set a goal of $6,000,000 to be reached this year in fund-raising on behalf of the U.I.A. and United Jewish Relief Agencies at a Canada-wide conference in Montreal under the auspices of the National Fund-raising Council for Israel and Overseas. The conference, at the Windsor Hotel, was attended by 160 delegates from 80 Jewish communities across Canada. The chairmen were Lawrence Freeman, of Ottawa, president; Zionists Organization of Canada; and Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, president of the Canadian Jewish Congress. Community commitments totalling $4,324,570 were pledged toward the objective of $6 million. These pledges represent an average increase of 26 per cent over last year. A panel discussion, moderated by Joseph N. Frank, of Montreal, Z.O.C. national treasurer, was held by: William Gittes, Arthur Pascal, of Montreal; Hyman Bessin, of Ottawa; Samuel Promislow, of Regina; Samuel S. Jacobson, of Halifax, who were members of the first national Canada-Israel Mission. Discussion centred on the need for liquidating the transit camps in which 10,000 immigrant families have been living for years awaiting proper housing. It was brought out that the reason for this lag, despite Israel's general economic progress, is the result of the need to maintain an intensive military posture in defense against a threatening circle of Arab countries which are receiving massive military hardware from the Soviet Union. The panel discussion underlined the fact that the recent tapering off of heavy immigration to Israel from points in Eastern Europe and elsewhere, while unwelcome by the Israelis, nevertheless offered an opportunity to focus all resources now on closing the camps, consolidating existing agricultural settlements and creating new settlements in the Negev. Bert Loeb, of Ottawa, and John D. Fienberg, of Toronto, chairmen and vice-chairman of the U.I.A., stressed the need for broadening the base of campaign leadership. Mr. Loeb urged that greater emphasis be placed on work with the smaller Jewish communities of Canada. U.I.A. vice-chairman, M. Fienberg, reported that the Toronto U.I.A. campaign expected to top the $2 million mark this year. In 1959, Toronto raised a record $2,560,000 and led all major North American cities in percentage of increase per pledge. As a result, the U.I.A. received $1,363,000 for 1959. Mr. Fienberg said that the Toronto community pledged a commitment of $1,635,000 for 1960 to the U.I.A. Speaking for Montreal, Monroe Abbey said that $2,000,000 would be raised for U.I.A.-UJRA (including Emergency Rescue Fund) as compared with $1,825,000 last year. Winnipeg's commitment, reported by Frank Marantz, is $425,000. It was $365,000 last year. $4-monton's commitment, given by Wolfe Margolis, is $105,000 for U.I.A. Morris Jacobson wired from Vancouver that the campaign would boost its previous U.I.A. support by $50,000. Hyman Hochberg, of Ottawa, said that the community would give $105,000. The campaign chairman is Hyman Bessin. For Regina, Samuel Promislow said the figure would be $50,000 as compared to $44,000 in 1959. Samuel Jacobson said Halifax was pledging $55,000. Last year's gift was $45,000. Hamilton said the community had pledged to increase last year's U.I.A. allocation of $188,000 by 26 per cent. William Kaplansky spoke for Saint John; Jack Levy for Sudbury. Attending from Montreal were: Monroe Abbey, Edward Barkoff, Barney Aaron, R. M. Bloomfield, Mrs. H. Bloomfield, I. M. IN MEMORIAM

FAIERMAN: In loving memory of a dearly beloved husband, and devoted father, Nathan Fierman, who passed away suddenly on April 11, 1947, seventh day in Passover.

No one knows the deep sorrow in our hearts, as we light the thirteenth candle. No one knows how sadly we miss you. No one knows the bitter pain we have suffered. Since we have lost you, our dearest, life hasn't been the same. Ever remembered by his wife, Hazel; children and grandchildren.

The Long Look Back and Ahead

BY HARRY HENRY A. FRIEDMAN, OF NEW YORK, EXECUTIVE VICE-CHAIRMAN OF THE UNITED JEWISH APPEAL

A certain calmness seems to underlie the position of the Jews of the world. There are no screaming headlines, no emergencies such as we had almost every month during the past five years: Fedayeen raids and reprisals, the Sinai campaign, expulsion from Egypt, revolt in Hungary, streams of immigrants, all the crises and calamities to which we of the United Jewish Appeal have had to alert you for half a decade. But now there is a moment of calmness. And with that calmness has come the opportunity for perspective, the chance to see where we stand, to ask what we have done and what we yet must do, to take a long look back and a long look ahead.

First, the long look back, beyond the hectic half-decade, beyond the dozen years of the State of Israel, beyond the twenty-two years of the UJA. Let us look back to the beginning of the century, when three million Jews came flooding into the United States out of Eastern Europe: Poland, Russia, Hungary, Rumania. Now, a short forty or fifty years later, five and a half million of us live in America in circumstances of a golden age, under the most benevolent democracy ever created.

But this twentieth century triumph is tempered, as we look back, by the memory of an appalling tragedy. For in the middle of this same period of fruition and growth, six million Jews of Europe were done to death. And after all the ashes settled and the smoke evaporated, there came a frantic period of Jews running, running, running over the face of the globe. Our people lived in camps and they lived on the run. They lived in trains, planes, boats, and wagons, on their way to lands of resettlement.

The chief land of haven in all these years has been Israel. In the first eleven and a half years of Israel's life, we helped bring almost one million people there. And we helped to resettle another 178,000 in other free lands, Canada, Australia, South America, and our own United States, out of a total of 300,000 who reached these havens.

Now to look ahead, as this great century of migration goes on: what remains to be done? How many others must we be prepared to help move to their resettlement? How many Jews are there in areas of danger or difficulty or oppression or spiritual suffocation on the face of the globe who yearn to go to a land where they will be free? Outside of the Jews of the Soviet Union: in all of North Africa, in Asia, in Eastern Europe, the total is 850,000. Not all of these will be able to, or will want to emigrate. But we must be prepared to help those for whom the opportunity occurs.

We must, this Passover, call on new resolve to finish our task in this great area of migration. We must persevere, until the day that every Jew is at peace and rest.

There is another great area in which we can look back with pride and look forward to with hope: the area of bringing help, succor, and assistance to Jews in countries from which they cannot or do not wish to move. The Joint Distribution Committee, backed for forty-five years of experience and acting with monies that you pour into the treasury of Jewish rescue through the U.J.A., has provided life-saving services through the years for countless myriads in need on all the inhabited continents of the earth.

In 1960, more than two hundred thousand Jewish men, women and children in twenty-five countries will receive J.D.C.'s loving care. In Morocco alone, to give you the most poignant human figure on the J.D.C. rolls, we feed thirty thousand Jewish schoolchildren the only hot meal they eat during the day. We have fed them every day of every month of every year, for almost ten years now. And we will do so for ten more years if we have to. We will not stop until there is no Jew anywhere who is in need of our help.

Now let us take our longest and hardest look at the most important process of all: the successful absorption into the life of Israel of the million immigrants we have brought there. How do we stand? What have we done for the million?

There is a simple criterion by which we judge when a man no longer needs help, when he is literally making his own living: it is when he no longer needs help from a relief agency and instead begins to pay his own taxes. Using this criterion: two-thirds of the million immigrants we have helped bring to Israel have switched from the relief rolls to the tax rolls. But that leaves out, leaves unsettled, leaves waiting one out of every three we have brought: 350,000 human beings are in need.

Never forget that we brought them there. We are responsible for them. We, nobody else. We told all Jewish immigrants and refugees who wanted to go to Israel that we would take them, support them, help them. And of the million who went, we have helped to do a pretty good job with two-thirds of them. But the unfulfilled third, 350,000 men, women and children, are still in need of something to complete their absorption: a house, a job, farms, schoolrooms for the children, the requisite number of hospital beds per thousand of population, etc., etc., etc. Let us focus now on these individual needs.

Houses: We want to help these people get houses. A new house in Israel is little more than 300 square feet. Think of it: how big is your kitchen? In Israel, we put four, five, even six people in about 300 square feet. A little red tile roof and white walls are better than living in a tent, or a tin hut, or a canvas shack in the shanty towns.

Shanty towns in Israel! They are called maabarot, which means "transit camps." Sixty thousand people are still living in them, some for as long as seven years. That is not very "transitory", is it? The slow despair in those little tin prisons makes family life impossible. The older children run off, to the army, to the city, and are glad not to come back; the younger children are frightened and bewildered. (Think of that as your family gathers for Passover.) They have waited long enough. Now, this year, during this comparatively quiet time, this breathing spell, we have to, we want to, we must build homes so that they can be moved. The shame of the shanties must be eliminated.

There are slum areas in Israel as well, places like Wadi Salib, in Haifa, and the Musrara quarter, in Jerusalem. These cancerous places, with their little crooked alleyways and their dirty chambers must be eliminated from the face of the land. When we leave housing, shift our focus to farming and take the long look back, the statistics are impressive. Since the day of Israel's statehood, less than a dozen years, the Jewish Agency, with the help of our money, has established 485 farm settlements throughout the land. On these settlements they have put 32,000 farm families, about 150,000 people.

These 150,000, most of them city dwellers, endured day after day of long, hard, unfamiliar labor on those blistering hot farms. They persevered; they kept at it and kept at it. And what have they gotten for their pains? How many of these 485 settlements are farming at full capacity today? How many of these 32,000 farm families whom we have transplanted are making a full living from the land? Not one.

Is this because the people are indolent? Because they do not know how to farm? Because there are no skillful instructors? Because they do not have the will? No, not at all. These farms are not self-sufficient, not bringing in enough money to support the families living on them, because they have not received what they need in order to earn. We have not provided the tractors, the irrigation, the electric power, the cows or the capitalization so urgently needed to make those farms work. We, who brought them there, have not given them what they must have, to lead full lives.

Some of these men who cannot make a living on their farms are put on trucks and moved down the road ten kilometers, where they crack rocks and build culverts or bridges or plant trees at the side of the road, necessary work, yes, but stop-gap, part of a labor subsidy. They work twelve or fifteen days a month and they make about $2.50 a day because funds do not exist to pay them more. What happens when the head of a family cannot earn enough to support it? His wife goes out and tries to work, and even the children may have to go out and try to work. Family life is disrupted; the youngsters are kept from school and burdened.

We have taken the long, hard look, back and ahead, and it has told us two things: in these years of migration and resettlement, we have accomplished a great deal, but we have fallen behind.

I believe I need say no more than that, this Passover season, to show you the urgency behind the United Jewish Appeal campaign for 1960: this critical year between crises. I feel, I know, that once you of the American Jewish community understand a problem, you rise to it. And you will rise to this 1960 campaign, yes; and the campaigns of '61 and '62 and '63, and slowly but surely we will help clean out these pockets of slums and deficient farms and heart-breaking daily struggle for 350,000, none of which we want to be continued in Israel. If we go at this with diligence and understanding, with heart and with head, then in two or three, perhaps four years, we will clean up the whole backlog of the "unabsorbed one-third" of the present refugee population. To these unfulfilled ones, our responsibilities in every sense of the word, let us dedicate our compassion.

FORMER U. N. UNDER-SECRETARY

Mr. Cohen's job in insuring the success of U. N. was to make sure that it reported its accomplishments with complete objectivity so that none of the member nations would feel that the whole organization was siding against it on any given question. He directed a world-wide organization with offices on every continent and hundreds of employees.

He took great pride in telling interviewers that under his direction the U. N. Department of Public Information was never accused of non-objective reporting.

Mr. Hammarskjöld has credited Mr. Cohen not only with establishing the Public Information Department but with writing the public relations policy that the U. N. still follows.

Mr. Cohen was a man of varied interests whose hobbies included operating a linotype machine, collecting old maps and reading everything from classical poetry to modern whodunits. Mr. Cohen was one of the first of the simultaneous interpreters used at international conferences. At the sixth Pan-American Conference in Havana, Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State for the United States, said "without Mr. Cohen at this meeting, it could not have succeeded."

Mr. Cohen later explained to friends that he had softened the words of all parties at that meeting in translation, thus bringing them closer to agreement. For himself, it was one of the high points of his career. He belonged to many organizations in the field of foreign affairs, had won several awards and had been decorated by several countries, says the New York Herald Tribune. He was a member of the Overseas Press Club.

Surviving are Dr. Cohen's widow, the former Rita Jane Mayer, an American whom he married in 1948, when she was on the staff of the United Nations. They had three children, Benjamin Carlos, Paz, and Roland David. Dr. Cohen also had a son, Luis, by a previous marriage; and two sisters, Mrs. Julia Cohen deNaranjo and Mrs. Berta Leuchner.

A memorial service was held for him in the Community Church, Park Avenue and 85th Street.

REPORT ON SOVIET JEWS

Britain ceased to be a haven for Middle European Jewish immigration, assimilation has cut deeply into Jewish cultural Jews.

Originally the Jewish Labor Committee was established in response to rescue of Jewish and non-Jewish labor leaders in the early days of the Nazi regime.

Benjamin Tabachinsky, the Committee's national director, said that "unconditional survival of the Jewish people must be the answer to those who preach the unconditional surrender of Jewish communities to assimilationism." The convention called on the Soviet Union to give its Jewish population the "same opportunities to exist as a national minority as they do to other minorities in the country."

In another resolution, the delegates hailed the United States Government's condemnation of "atrocities in South Africa" but called on the Government to "be equally dynamic on the home front in meeting the threat to civil rights of our citizens," says the New York Times. Adolph Held was re-elected national chairman of the committee; David Dubinsky, treasurer; Jacob Pat, executive secretary and Benjamin Tabachinsky, national director.

"stated aims of international Communism" and "the activities of the Sino-Soviet bloc in this framework."

The defense official expressed the belief that no "right-thinking American would let down our guard for freedom."

"Our defensive structure," he declared, "is like a great dam holding back the determined waters. But like a great dam the slightest break-through would be opened and exploited by the pent-up waters until the land was laid waste by the oppressive flood. This we cannot allow."

Mr. Short spoke to 600 delegates at the biennial convention of the National Jewish Welfare Board at the Chase Hotel, says the New York Times. The Board, with national headquarters in New York, is the Government-authorized agency serving the religious, welfare and morale needs of Jewish personnel in the armed forces and the Veterans Administration hospitals.
